*EU-Based Legal Support Company and U.S. Electronic Discovery Industry
Experts Join Up to Educate on International Discovery Matters*

LONDON, (August 21, 2008) – London-based TRILANTIC, the leading EU-based electronic discovery service provider, today announced that Nigel Murray, TRILANTIC's founder and managing director, will present along with three respected U.S. industry experts at ILTA's 31st Annual Educational Conference on August 25, 2008. Murray will be joined by Joanne Lane of Kramer Levin Naftalis & Frankel LLP, Stephen Dooley of Sullivan & Cromwell LLP and Browning Mearns of DLA Piper, to discuss "International Discovery and Handling Foreign Language Data" <http://conference.iltanet.org/PersonifyEbusiness/Default.aspx?tabid=157&productid=51>.

ILTA's Annual Educational Conference will take place in Dallas, Texas at the Gaylord Texan, August 25-28. For more than three decades, ILTA has provided peer-networking and information resources to those who support technology in law firms and law departments worldwide. The 2008 conference is certain to be an enlightening experience with 26 educational tracks, key industry speakers and 150 legal vendors. For more information, visit <http://conference.iltanet.org>.

As a large number of litigation and regulatory cases being fought in the U.S. have a UK or European dimension, TRILANTIC's experience in Europe and its comprehensive service offering to U.S. clients are particularly strong. "With the many differences between the UK and U.S. legal systems, it is pertinent to understand practical and jurisdictional issues related to e-discovery/e-disclosure when handling international matters," said Murray.

This year TRILANTIC added to their Web site the EU Data Protection Rules for data collection and removal for all 27 Member States. In addition, TRILANTIC has established a network of data protection lawyers across Europe to whom clients can be referred for specific matter-related advice.

TRILANTIC recently announced that it was named a Top Electronic Discovery Service Provider - Law Firm Rankings, by the highly respected 2008 Socha-Gelbmann Electronic Discovery Survey Report. TRILANTIC is the only EU-based provider to make the list of top 20 providers in the 2008 survey. Full survey results are available via the Socha Consulting Web site (www.sochaconsulting.com/2008survey.php).
