Women in eDiscovery™ and The American Society of Digital Forensics & eDiscovery™ Host First Regional Event

ATLANTA, GA – September 22, 2009 – Women in eDiscovery and The American Society of Digital Forensics & eDiscovery today announced that they will be hosting their first joint regional educational event at Cox Enterprises, Inc. on Tuesday, September 29, from 12:00 until 2:00 PM. This event will feature two renowned experts in eDiscovery: Former Magistrate Judge Ronald Hedges and Jason Baron, Co-Editor in Chief of The Sedona Conference Commentary. This event is geared toward legal professionals, technologists and law enforcement personnel from the southeastern United States.

This first event brings together two leading not-for-profit organizations. "We are very pleased to have forged a strong partnership with Women in eDiscovery," says K. David Benton, Executive Director of The American Society of Digital Forensics & eDiscovery (ASDFED). "ASDFED was founded on the concept of bridge-building, and this meeting is the first of many joint events our organizations plan to host across the United States. When you look at the mission statement of each organization, it makes sense to form a strong alliance as our organizations compliment each other and provide educational opportunities throughout the industry."

The American Society of Digital Forensics & eDiscovery is a 501c3 not-for-profit organization focusing on creating bridges between the technology and legal professions through educational seminars, lectures and scholarly publications.

Women in eDiscovery is an organization that brings together businesswomen interested in technology related to the legal industry and provides opportunities to help them grow personally and professionally through leadership, education, networking support, and national recognition.
